RE: ERNEST DELAVAN
(True "And I Love My Song")

Having collected genealogical notes on the Delavan Family for my own pleasure and information over a period of several years and as other members of the family seem to be interested in the results of my efforts, feeble though they may be, I now present what I have gleaned within the pages of this pamphlet.

1927681

Not feeling qualified and in a financial position to undertake a complete study and writing up of the family history there are of necessity many omissions and inaccuracies included. This however was not intentional but because data concerning them was not readily available. This pamphlet therefore represents what might be called a preliminary genealogy and a step in the right direction for so far as I have been able to determine it represents the first attempt to record genealogical data on the Delavan family.

The outstanding feature to my mind, is the data found relative to the ten sons of Timothy and Hannah (Denton) Delavan, these ten brothers of the American Revolution, good men and true they must have been, and we their descendants should be justly proud of their achievements.

I cannot guarantee the accuracy of dates, names, etc. as all information was taken from Family Records, Public Records, Grave Stones, Genealogies, Histories of Towns and Counties, Probate Records, etc. and therefore recorded as found with the exception of conflicting dates in which case the apparent best authority was used. There may have been more children in some families than shown, but not knowing the details no record could be made.

If any one obtains any pleasure or needed information from reading this pamphlet, I shall feel well repaid for the many pleasant hours spent in preparing it.

Further information or correction of errors will be gratefully received.

RE-UNION HYMN
(Tune "Auld Lang Syne")

Come Delavan's lot's all unite
In songs of hearty cheer.
And thank the Providence benign
That spared us thru the year;
The Providence that gives us life,
And happy length of days,-
That gives us love, and home, and friends,
And fashions all our ways.

The year has gone; the wheel of time-
Through frost and summer bloom,-
Has brought us nearer, every day,
The dark and silent tomb.
But Hope, the ever-shining sun,
Has brightened all our way,
And now we stand, with well-loved friends,
At our Re-Union day.

Since last we met, the Reaper swift
Has gathered in the sheaves,
And with our sweet reunion joy,
We grieve with those who grieve.
But love and sorrow ever go
Close-mated, hand in hand,
Until we sorrow, never more,
In Heaven's Re-Union Land.

So raise the song and swell the strain,
And lift our chorus high,
Until the notes we sing in love
Re-echo through the sky.
May God in love for many days
Unbroken keep our band,
And all the Delavans of earth
Clasp loving hand in hand.

And when we've crossed the river dark,
And reached the Heavenly shore,
May love be still our guiding star,
Dwell with us ever more.
Around the Father's glorious throne,
May we our voices raise,
And live in love's Re-Union dear
Through all the Heavenly days.

By Erastus Calkin Delavan.

CORNELIUS DELAVAN
STAMFORD CONNECTICUT
AND
SOME OF HIS DESCENDENTS

2476 49

FIRST GENERATION

1. CORNELIUS DELAVAN, was according to tradition a French Huguenot, who fled from France upon the revocation of the famous "Edict of Nantes" by Louis XVI the reigning Monarch. This tradition has been a matter of family controversy for years and as no definite proof has been found to substantiate it we will not go further into the subject.

The first definite record of Cornelius in America is found in the Stamford, Connecticut, records where we find his name mentioned as owning property there in the year 1713. In 1746 his name also appears in the list of officials of Stamford.

John Delavan, probably a brother of Cornelius, must have been in Stamford about as early, as he had a son Cornelius, born there in the year 1715. However no further records of this branch have come to light.

Cornelius (1), married at Stamford, October 3, 1712, Justice Holly performing the ceremony, Deborah Green, daughter of John Latner Green, of Stamford. He died previous to December 3, 1745, as on that date letters of administration of his estate, were granted by the Probate Court of Stamford, to Timothy Delavan, his son. Inventory of the Estate was taken December 6, 1745, by John Holly and Obadiah Seeley, and filed January 7, 1746 by Timothy Delavan, administrator (vol. 2 - 1744 - pp 265, 295.)

Children of Cornelius and Deborah (Green) Delavan -- All born at Stamford, were:

2. + i Timothy, b. July 29, 1713; d. Feb. 1, 1803.
3. ii John, b. Nov. 16, 1715.
4. iii Sarah, b. Oct. 27, 1717.
5. iv Deborah, b. Nov. 13, 1719.
6. v Martha, b. 1722?; d. Jan. 6, 1732/3.
7. vi Abraham, d. Oct. 27, 1732.

Stamford Reg. of Births, Marriages & Deaths, by Rev. E. B. Huntington, pp. 30, 31. Note the name has also been recorded as de'l Avant, Delavan, Delavan and Delivan.

SECOND GENERATION

2. TIMOTHY DELAVAN (Cornelius 1), was born at Stamford, Connecticut, July 29, 1713 and died probably at North Salem, Westchester County, New York, February 1, 1803. He married at Norwalk, Connecticut, February 23, 1737/8, Rev. J. Eyeels (Eells) of Canaan, performing the ceremony, Hannah Bouton, daughter of Nathaniel Bouton of New Canaan. She was born December 5, 1721 and died November 5, 1813.

Soon after the birth of their seventh son, Samuel, the family removed to Southeast, Dutchess County, New York, (now Putnam County) which at that time was referred to as the Fredericksburgh Precinct. Timothy Sr. later removed to North Salem, Westchester County, N. Y. for we find his name mentioned there April 24, 1758, when he was listed as a sergeant in the Westchester County militia, under command of Captain John Verplank.

(N.Y. Hist.Soc.Coll.vol 24, p. 104)

Of Hannah Bouton, his wife, it was said that her "Whig" principles were so strong that she would not go to hear a clergyman preach who belonged to her denomination because he was an Englishman. She said "she know he was a Tory."

During the Revolution the family was much exposed to the depredations of the Tories, Cowboys and Skinners and were constantly in a state of alarm (N.Y. Globe July 21, 1847.) Nine of their sons saw active service in the Revolution and the tenth being too young at that period, served later in Wayne's Legion against the Indians. It would also appear from the rolls of Revolutionary soldiers that Timothy Sr. served as a private but no definite proof has been found.

Another interesting matter of family history is that when Gen. George Washington entered New York, he was provided with a body guard of soldiers, who escorted him from his landing place to Franco's Tavern. This body guard consisted entirely of the fine looking sons of Timothy Delavan, as then recorded. The youngest, Cornelius, was slightly below the required age, but was accepted as a member of the unusually fine development and soldierly bearing. It is said that after peace was declared a public dinner was given to Timothy Delavan and his sons in the City of New York, in appreciation of service performed during the war.

THIRD GENERATION

8. TIMOTHY DELAVAN (Timothy 2, Cornelius 1), was born at Stamford, Connecticut, May 27, 1738 and died at Patterson, New York January 19, 1813. (g.s.) His remains are buried in the Presbyterian Church Burial Ground at Patterson, Putnam County, New York not far from the grave of Colonel Henry Ludington, under whose command he served during the Revolution. Several of his children are also buried near him.

Timothy was a tenant-farmer on the Philipse estates, and on the attainder of the Philipse family, bought his farm from the Commissioners of Forfeitures. This farm was bounded on the South by the Westchester County line, and lay about a mile West of Peach Pond.

From a muster roll of His Majesties seventh company of militia in the upper battalion in the County of Westchester, we find the name of Timothy Delavan listed as a private. (N. Y. Gen. & Biographical Record, vol. 38, p. 88.) He served during the Revolution as Ensign and 2nd Lieutenant in Captain David Waterbury's company of Colonel Henry Ludington's regiment of Dutchess County, New York militia. (N. Y. in the Revolution as Colony & State by J. A. Roberts. vol. 1, pp. 28, 149, 215, 252.)

He married in the Parish Church of Christ, Salem, October 12, 1761, Sarah Close, born February 12, 1739 and died September 22, 1806. (g.s.) Her remains are buried beside their son Timothy 3rd in North Salem Cemetery, New York.

Children of Timothy and Sarah (Close) Delavan, were:

THIRD GENERATION

9. ABRAHAM DELAVAN (Timothy 2, Cornelius 1), was born in Stamford, Connecticut, September 8, 1739 and died October 13, 1795. He married Hannah ----.

The United States Census of 1790 records the family, as living at Frederickstown, Dutchess County, New York and included 3 males over 16 years including head of family and 1 female. The family also must have resided in Westchester County for we find Abraham and his wife Hannah, mentioned in the History of Westchester County by J. Thomas Scharf, A. M. (vol. 1, p. 506) "as purchasing on the 27th of May 1773, 23 acres on which he was living and rented other lands as the rent rolls of the "Delancy's" show. Also on the 1st of January 1774, there was due 4 pounds from Hannah his wife, for the rent of No. 12 "Crow Hill."

Abraham was a provincial soldier, serving as a private in the 7th company of militia, called the upper battalion from the County of Westchester, under command of Colonel William Willet, Esq. (New York Gen. & Biographical Record, vol. 38, p. 88.) He also served as a private during the Revolution, in the 7th regiment of Dutchess County militia, from the Fredericksburgh Precinct (now part of Putnam County) under command of Colonel Henry Ludington. (New York in the Revolution as Colony and State by J. A. Roberts, vol. 1, p. 150.)

Children of Abraham and Hannah Delavan, were:

31. 1     Gilbert,     Mentioned in Bolton's History of Westchester County.
32. + 11    Jesse,     b. 1764; d. June 24, 1815. (g.s.)

Other Auth. Stamford Conn., Vital Statistics; History of Westchester County, New York by Rev. R. Bolton, vol. 2, p. 726.

11. JOHN DELAVAN (Timothy 2, Cornelius 1), was born at Stamford, Connecticut, January 30, 1743 and died at North Salem, Westchester County, New York, January 8, 1834.

He was evidently a prominent citizen of North Salem as we find his name listed as Commissioner of Roads in 1790. During the Revolution he served as a private in Captain Lockwood's company of Colonel Crane's 4th Westchester County, New York militia and also in Captain Delavan's (his brother) company of Colonel Drake's 3rd Westchester regiment.

He died intestate and on January 14, 1834 the following petition was made to Jonathan Ward, Surrogate of Westchester County by his son Chauncey Delavan. "The petition of Chauncey Delavan of the Town of North Salem, in the County of Westchester aforesaid. Respectfully sheweth; That John Delavan, late of the town and county aforesaid, deceased. That the said deceased died on the eighth day of January instant at the said town of North Salem, that being the place of his residence at the time of his death; That the said deceased died having a widow Martha Delavan and his petitioner his only son; That the said deceased died intestate as is believed, as no will has been found; That the personal property of the deceased will not exceed in value the sum of fifteen hundred dollars; That the said widow is entitled to administration on the said estate and is desirous that your petitioner should join with her in the said administration; your petitioner therefore prays that administration of the estate of the said deceased may be granted to the said Martha Delavan and your petitioner, etc." This petition was granted by the Surrogate's Court and on the sixth of December 1834 a public auction was held and several parcels of real estate belonging to the late John Delavan were sold. One of the parcels of said land records a mortgage for $1,000.00 owned by Jane, Catherine and Dotsey Delavan (children of John Delavan) as assignees thereof from David Seaman.

John Delavan married 1st at Greenwich, Connecticut, Rachel Husted, born 1751 and died at North Salem, Westchester County, New York, July 8, 1781. (g.s.) He married 2nd at Ridgefield, Connecticut, October 6, 1785, Martha Keeler, born 1760 and died at North Salem, Westchester County, New York, March 10, 1843. (g.s.) John and his two wives are buried in North Salem Cemetery.

In the History of Westchester County New York, by the Rev. R. Bolton the children of John Delavan are partially listed but from the dates of birth of the children and the date of his second marriage it appears that an error was made in allocating the children to the proper wife.

Children of John and Rachel (Husted) Delavan, were:

- 33. + I Deborah, b. Dec. 14, 1768; d. May 8, 1825. (g.s.)
- 34. II John,
- 35. + III Frederick, b. 1780; d. April 13, 1819. (g.s.)
- 36. IV Nancy, m. July 1, 1798, Christian Schults.

Children of John and Marth (Keeler) Delavan, were:

- 37. V Catharine,
- 38. VI Elizabeth,
- 39. VII Jane, b. 1788; d. November 12, 1865. (g.s.) unmarried.
- 40. VIII Chauncey, b. 1791; d. December 18, 1863. (g.s.) He resided a few miles north of Fishkill Village; a bachelor and a regular country squire; a gentleman farmer and owned a beautiful house, great barns and had a park like drive shaded with Maple trees about a quarter of a mile long between the house and highway. His home was presided over by two maiden sisters of the old school and well educated. Another sister married a farmer by the name of Brinckerhoff, whose farm adjoined that of Chauncey's.
- 41. IX Benjamin, b. 1792; d. November 26, 1827. (g.s.) He was Major Surgeon in the United States Army and died in the service at Natchitoches, Louisiana. He was a veteran of the War of 1812. Buried in North Salem Cemetery.
- 42. X Maria, b. 1801; d. June 13, 1805. (g.s.)

THIRD GENERATION

12. NATHANIEL DELAVAN (Timothy 2, Cornelius 1), was born at Stamford, Connecticut, September 14, 1746 and died at Franklin now Patterson, Putnam County, New York, August 9, 1798. His remains are buried in the Presbyterian Church Burial Ground at Patterson, near the grave of his brother Lieut. Timothy.

During the Revolution he served as Major in the 3rd Regiment of Westchester County militia and was Colonel in the same regiment June 25, 1778. He had command of a company that escorted General George Washington into the City of New York, in the taking possession of the City after the evacuation of the English troops.

He was a Freemason and one of a number instrumental in applying for a warrant from the Grand Master to erect a lodge at Frederickstown. This lodge was constituted October 1, 1794 and it was voted that it should be called "Columbia Lodge."

He was a member of the Assembly during the fifth session of the Legislature 1781-1782. This and the fact that Nathaniel was the owner of many acres of land and kept slaves would indicate that he was a man of influence.

He married 1st Mary Wonderhill (Underhill?), born September 24, 1747 and died February 1782. He married 2nd Mary Thompson, born at Danbury, Connecticut, June 21, 1752 and died April 22, 1849 at her son-in-law's residence (Richard Nelson who married her daughter Cordelia), in the City of New York, a firm believer in the Christian Religion and retained her mental faculties to the last in almost full vigor of life. She was born at Danbury, Connecticut, and when the English burned that City she with the family fled from the place but was in hearing of the firing of the guns upon the infantry. Her father and two brothers were in the battle but escaped unharmed so far as tradition tells the story. After the death of her husband Nathaniel Delavan, she married February 7, 1804, Thomas Nelson and resided at Poughkeepsie, Dutchess County, New York, until he died.

Children of Nathaniel and Mary (Wonderhill or Underhill) Delavan, were:

THIRD GENERATION

14. SAMUEL DELAVAN (Timothy 2, Cornelius 1), was born at Stamford, Connecticut, March 23, 1752 and died in Salem, Westchester County, New York, previous to October 21, 1786 (perhaps May 7, 1786) as on that date, his will was filed for probate, and mentions his wife Agnes; daughters Anne, Cornelia and Levisse; brothers Cornelius and Timothy; children of his brothers Abraham and Nathan. His sister-in-law Hannah, wife of his brother Abraham to be guardian of his children, should their mother die before they became of age.

On November 17, 1784, mention is made of Samuel and his wife, Agnes, in a mortgage of land in upper Salem, bounded by land belonging to Philip Briggs, deceased.

Samuel served during the Revolution as Captain, Westchester County Rangers September 1776; Captain, 3rd regiment of Westchester County militia, under command of Colonel Samuel Drake June 25, 1778; Captain, light horse troop same regiment, February 27, 1779; served to close of the war.

History records an incident in Samuel's life during the attack on "Ward's House" by Major Campbell of the English forces during the Revolution. "That Captain Samuel Delavan commanded a foraging party, in the vicinity of Morrisania and met with the enemy who came up from King's Bridge where they had a fort. The Americans were fifty strong and the British eighty. The battle raged all day across the River Bronx, and it was night before they returned to "Ward's House." Capt. Delavan was saved that night in consequence of wearing a red coat thus passing as a British officer."

He married March 23, 1774, Agnes Tyler, daughter of Jehiel Tyler. She died August 26, 1832, aged 78 years. (g.s.)

Children of Samuel and Agnes (Tyler) Delavan, were:

Bolton, vol. 2, p. 726.

15. NATHAN DELAVAN (Timothy 2, Cornelius 1), was born May 7, 1755 and died previous to October 3, 1793, as on that date letters on the estate of Nathan Delavan were granted to his wife Hannah Delavan for administration.

Nathan served during the Revolution as a private in company "C", Captain Ephraim Lockwood, in Colonel Crane's regiment of Westchester County militia, which was frequently in active service in the numerous engagements which took place, in that storm center of the Revolution, about the City of New York and along the Hudson River. On June 24, 1786, Nathan was commissioned a 1st Lieutenant of militia.

Introduction

The purpose of this study is to investigate the effects of various factors on the growth of a certain plant species. The study was conducted over a period of six months, during which time the plants were grown under different conditions. The results of the study are presented in the following sections.

The first section of the study describes the experimental design and the methods used to collect data. The second section presents the results of the study, showing the growth of the plants under different conditions. The third section discusses the implications of the results and the conclusions drawn from the study.

The study was conducted in a controlled environment, where the plants were grown in pots. The pots were placed in a greenhouse, where the temperature and humidity were controlled. The plants were watered regularly, and the amount of water was recorded. The growth of the plants was measured by the height of the plants and the number of leaves.

The results of the study show that the growth of the plants was affected by the amount of water they received. The plants that received more water grew taller and had more leaves than the plants that received less water.

The study also found that the growth of the plants was affected by the temperature of the greenhouse. The plants that were grown in a warmer greenhouse grew faster than the plants that were grown in a cooler greenhouse. This suggests that temperature is an important factor in the growth of this plant species.

The study also found that the growth of the plants was affected by the humidity of the greenhouse. The plants that were grown in a more humid greenhouse grew faster than the plants that were grown in a less humid greenhouse.

The study concludes that the growth of this plant species is affected by the amount of water, the temperature, and the humidity of the environment. These factors should be considered when growing this plant species in a controlled environment.

18. CORNELIUS DELAVAN (Timothy 2, Cornelius 1), was born June 9, 1766 and was said to have been killed by the Indians while serving in the cavalry, in General Wayne's Legion, near the rapids of the Miami, a river which empties into Lake Erie at its western-most point. It was here on August 20, 1794 that General Wayne and his Legion attacked the Indians, the cavalry being in the thick of the fray, and Captain Campbell and several of his troopers were killed. Perhaps this was the time when Cornelius met his death.

The New York Globe of July 21, 1847 relating a sketch of the Delavan family and their services during the Revolution mentions Cornelius as "being too young at that period for actual service did however in company with his brothers parade as a curiosity in the presence of many witnesses. He later joined Wayne's Legion and was present in several severe conflicts with the Indians, having narrowly escaped death, his charger being killed under him. He was also present at the great and decisive battle upon the rapids of the Miami, and participated in its victory with his companions in arms, Captain W. H. Harrison, the brave aide-de-camp of General Wayne, recently elevated to the first office in the gift of his countrymen, and Captain Solomon Van Rensselaer, who was desperately wounded but survives."

Another anecdote is that Cornelius served in the cavalry and that at one time, while out of the fort to get some water unarmed, he saw an Indian with a tomahawk in his hand and a scalping knife in his mouth making a dash upon him. He escaped into the fort but was determined on having revenge at the first opportunity, which was soon offered in a skirmish with the Indians. He chased one who was attempting to get over some obstacle, and at the same moment as the Indian bent over the barrier, he struck him on the back with his cutlass. Leaving the Indian hanging he took his scalp as a trophy.

Cornelius Delavan never married.

Sage of the East! where wisdom rears her head
Augustus, taught in Virtue's path to tread
O'ild thousands of his race, elected stands
Unanimous to Legislative bands;
Endowed with every art to frame just laws,
Learns to hate vice, to virtue gives applause.

Augustus, Oh! thy name thats ever dear
Unrivalled stands to crown each passing year;
Great are the virtues that exalt thy mind,
Unenvied merit marks thy work refined
Sincerely rigid for your country's right
To save her Liberty you deigned to fight;
Undaunted courage graced your manly brow,
Secured such honors as the Gods endow.

Bright is the page; the record of thy days
Attracts my muse thus to rehearse thy praise
Rejoyce then, patriots, statesmen, all rejoice!
Kindle his praises with one general voice!
Enblazon out his deeds, his virtues prize,
Reiterate his praises to the skies

CHAPTER I

The first part of the book is devoted to a general survey of the subject. It begins with a definition of the term "philosophy" and then proceeds to a discussion of the various branches of the subject. The author then discusses the history of philosophy and the different schools of thought that have arisen over the centuries.

The second part of the book is devoted to a detailed examination of the various branches of philosophy.

Metaphysics, epistemology, ethics, politics, aesthetics, and logic are all discussed in detail.

The third part of the book is devoted to a discussion of the relationship between philosophy and the other sciences. The author argues that philosophy is the foundation of all science and that it is essential for a proper understanding of the natural world.

The fourth part of the book is devoted to a discussion of the role of philosophy in society. The author argues that philosophy is essential for a proper understanding of the human condition and for the development of a just and equitable society.

The fifth part of the book is devoted to a discussion of the future of philosophy. The author argues that philosophy is still a vital and relevant subject and that it has the potential to make significant contributions to our understanding of the world.

The sixth part of the book is devoted to a discussion of the various methods of philosophy. The author discusses the methods of logic, dialectic, and induction and argues that each of these methods has its own strengths and weaknesses.

The seventh part of the book is devoted to a discussion of the various schools of thought in philosophy. The author discusses the ideas of Plato, Aristotle, Kant, Hegel, and Marx and argues that each of these schools of thought has made significant contributions to the development of philosophy.

Introduction

The purpose of this report is to provide a comprehensive overview of the current state of the research in the field of artificial intelligence, specifically focusing on the development of intelligent agents and their applications in various domains.

This report is organized into several sections. The first section discusses the historical context and the evolution of artificial intelligence. The second section provides a detailed overview of the various types of intelligent agents and their capabilities. The third section explores the applications of intelligent agents in different domains, such as robotics, natural language processing, and game playing. The fourth section discusses the challenges and future directions of research in this field.

1. Historical Context and Evolution of Artificial Intelligence

The concept of artificial intelligence has a long history, dating back to ancient times when people began to create mechanical devices that could perform tasks that were previously done by humans. In the 19th century, the development of the first mechanical calculators marked a significant milestone in the history of artificial intelligence. In the 20th century, the development of electronic computers and the discovery of the principles of artificial neural networks led to the rapid advancement of artificial intelligence research.

The development of artificial intelligence has been driven by a variety of factors, including the desire to create machines that can think and learn like humans, the need for machines that can perform tasks that are too difficult or dangerous for humans, and the desire to understand the human mind and its processes. The development of artificial intelligence has also been driven by the desire to create machines that can help us to solve complex problems and to improve our lives.

The development of artificial intelligence has led to a wide range of applications, including the development of intelligent agents that can perform tasks such as playing games, solving puzzles, and controlling robots. The development of artificial intelligence has also led to the development of intelligent systems that can help us to understand the human mind and its processes. The development of artificial intelligence has also led to the development of intelligent systems that can help us to solve complex problems and to improve our lives.

The development of artificial intelligence has also led to the development of intelligent systems that can help us to understand the human mind and its processes. The development of artificial intelligence has also led to the development of intelligent systems that can help us to solve complex problems and to improve our lives. The development of artificial intelligence has also led to the development of intelligent systems that can help us to understand the human mind and its processes.

CHAPTER IV

The first part of the chapter is devoted to a discussion of the various methods of determining the rate of reaction. The second part is devoted to a discussion of the various factors which influence the rate of reaction.

Method of determination	Rate of reaction
1. Change in concentration	1.0
2. Change in pressure	2.0
3. Change in volume	3.0
4. Change in color	4.0

The rate of reaction is defined as the change in concentration of a reactant or product per unit time.

The rate of reaction is affected by several factors, namely, temperature, concentration, surface area, and catalyst.

Factor	Effect on rate of reaction
1. Temperature	1.0
2. Concentration	2.0
3. Surface area	3.0
4. Catalyst	4.0

The rate of reaction is also affected by the nature of the reactants and the presence of a catalyst.

Factor	Effect on rate of reaction
1. Nature of reactants	1.0
2. Presence of catalyst	2.0

The rate of reaction is also affected by the presence of a catalyst.

1. Presence of catalyst	1.0
2. Nature of reactants	2.0
3. Surface area	3.0
4. Concentration	4.0
5. Temperature	5.0

The rate of reaction is also affected by the presence of a catalyst.

CHAPTER II

The first part of the book is devoted to a general survey of the subject. It begins with a definition of the term "philosophy" and then proceeds to a discussion of the various branches of the subject. The author then turns to a consideration of the history of philosophy, from the ancient Greeks to the modern era. He then discusses the various schools of thought that have arisen in the history of philosophy, and finally, he discusses the various methods that have been used in the study of philosophy.

The second part of the book is devoted to a detailed examination of the various branches of philosophy. It begins with a discussion of metaphysics, and then proceeds to a discussion of epistemology, ethics, and politics. The author then discusses the various schools of thought that have arisen in the history of philosophy, and finally, he discusses the various methods that have been used in the study of philosophy.

FIFTH GENERATION

153. NATHAN DELAVAN (George 4, Nathan 3, Timothy 2, Cornelius 1), was born at Brewster, Putnam County, New York, December 17, 1809 and died at Guilford, New York, June 2, 1895. He was buried there in Sunset Hill Cemetery, with other members of the family.

When a young man Nathan set out to visit a cousin at Cortland County, New York. While in Oxford he was told there was work for a "quick" young man in Guilford, six or seven miles distant, who could make nails. So he delayed his visit to his cousin, went to Guilford and later married, built his home, and reared his children there. He was nearly eighty-six years old when he passed away, a most unusual old gentleman, with a beautiful head of long silky white hair and a most keen mind. If any question arose as to dates or people, the townsfolk would say "we will ask Uncle Nathan he will remember" and he seldom failed to answer their questions.

He was a blacksmith and had the only frame for shoeing oxen in that part of the country. His stone shop which he built in 1840/41 had three forges and was in the lower corner of the yard surrounding the house he built on the main road of the village.

He married at Guilford, New York, August 18, 1834, Abigail Eliza Smith, daughter of Samuel Asher Smith of Guilford. She was born at Guilford, May 17, 1812 and died there February 24, 1879.

Children of Nathan and Abigail Eliza (Smith) DeLavan, were:

161. JAMES HARVEY DELAVAN (Oliver 4, Nathan 3, Timothy 2, Cornelius 1), was born at Fishkill, New York, September 25, 1810 and died at Morton, Orleans County, New York, March 25, 1851. He married 1st February 8, 1837, Betsy A. Dyer, born 1811 and died April 15, 1841. He married 2nd January 2, 1850, Susan Boardman.

THEORY

The first part of the theory is the definition of the function  $f(x)$  which is defined as the sum of the squares of the first  $n$  natural numbers. This is given by the formula:

$$f(n) = 1^2 + 2^2 + 3^2 + \dots + n^2$$

The second part of the theory is the proof that the function  $f(n)$  is a polynomial of degree 3. This is done by using the method of finite differences. The first differences are given by:

$$f(n) - f(n-1) = n^2$$

The second differences are given by:

$$n^2 - (n-1)^2 = 2n - 1$$

The third differences are given by:

$$2n - 1 - (2(n-1) - 1) = 2$$

Since the third differences are constant, the function  $f(n)$  is a polynomial of degree 3.

The third part of the theory is the derivation of the formula for  $f(n)$ . This is done by using the method of undetermined coefficients. We assume that  $f(n)$  is a polynomial of degree 3, and we write it as:

$$f(n) = an^3 + bn^2 + cn + d$$

We then substitute  $n=1, 2, 3, 4$  into this equation and solve for  $a, b, c, d$ . This gives us the formula:

$$f(n) = \frac{n(n+1)(2n+1)}{6}$$

The fourth part of the theory is the proof that the formula for  $f(n)$  is correct. This is done by using the method of mathematical induction. We first prove that the formula is true for  $n=1$ . Then we assume that it is true for  $n=k$  and prove that it is true for  $n=k+1$ . This completes the proof.

EXAMPLES

Example 1. Find the value of  $f(10)$ .
Solution. We use the formula  $f(n) = \frac{n(n+1)(2n+1)}{6}$ . Substituting  $n=10$ , we get:
$$f(10) = \frac{10(10+1)(2(10)+1)}{6} = \frac{10 \cdot 11 \cdot 21}{6} = 385$$

Example 2. Find the value of  $f(20)$ .
Solution. We use the formula  $f(n) = \frac{n(n+1)(2n+1)}{6}$ . Substituting  $n=20$ , we get:
$$f(20) = \frac{20(20+1)(2(20)+1)}{6} = \frac{20 \cdot 21 \cdot 41}{6} = 2870$$

193. DAVID BRITSON DELAVAN, M. D. (Edward Close 5, Tompkins Close 4, Timothy 3, Timothy 2, Cornelius 1), was born May 1, 1850 at No. 8 Warren Street, New York City near City Hall. The early life of Dr. Delavan was spent in New York City where for several years he attended the elementary school of that eminent instructor, Mr. Jay Greenough. In 1860 the family removed to Tarrytown, New York where he attended private school and prepared for college at the Holbrook Military Institute at Ossining. In 1868 he entered Yale College with the Class of 1872, and upon graduating he received a letter from Prof. James Dwight Dana as a faithful instructor in Mineralogy. He then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City under the preceptorship of its president, Willard Parker, M. D. and graduated in 1875 as M. D. securing honorable mention in competition with the late William H. Welch, M. D. and several other class mates and friends, since of eminent professional standing. The subject of his thesis was: "Tubercular Laryngitis."

For eighteen months he was interne at Charity Hospital (now City Hospital), receiving there a particularly large and wide experience, under an attending staff which included several distinguished practitioners. Intending to specialize upon the subject of Diseases of the Throat, he had long before graduation begun the study of Laryngology with Anton Rappanor, formerly of Zurich, Switzerland, a brilliant pupil of the late Ludwig Turck of Vienna, and a friend of Louis Aggasiz of Harvard, at whose home he died.

Graduating from Charity Hospital in 1876, he was for six months, Resident Physician and Surgeon at the Presbyterian Hospital, New York. Entering upon the practice of medicine in New York City, Dr. Delavan soon joined the New York Dispensary, under the directorship of Dr. William T. Bull and later secured the position of Laryngologist to the DeMilt Dispensary, which position he held for eleven years. These are only a small part of the many positions he held with credit in the Medical Profession.

In 1918 during World War 1, he was War Secretary of the American Laryngological Association and introduced the successful treatment of carriers of diphtheria, before impossible of control, through disinfection by means of the Dakin-Dunham solution of the antiseptic Dichloramine - T, bringing the subject to general attention and affecting its wide spread acceptance particularly by the U. S. Government who adopted it for the protection of soldiers and sailors here and in France.

Dr. Delavan has been signally honored by being made a Fellow in several foreign and domestic societies. He now resides in New York City and recently celebrated his 90th birthday. He married June 14, 1899, Marion Ramsey, daughter

CHAPTER 1

The first part of the book is devoted to a general discussion of the theory of the firm. It begins with a review of the basic concepts of microeconomics, such as the firm, the market, and the profit function. It then discusses the various models of the firm, including the neoclassical model, the transaction cost model, and the resource-based view.

The second part of the book is devoted to a detailed analysis of the neoclassical model of the firm. It begins with a discussion of the production function, which relates the inputs of labor and capital to the output of the firm. It then discusses the cost function, which relates the inputs to the total cost of production. Finally, it discusses the profit function, which relates the inputs to the profit of the firm.

The third part of the book is devoted to a detailed analysis of the transaction cost model of the firm. It begins with a discussion of the nature of transactions, which are the exchanges of goods and services between firms. It then discusses the costs of transactions, which are the costs of searching for trading partners, negotiating contracts, and enforcing contracts. Finally, it discusses the implications of transaction costs for the structure of the firm.

The fourth part of the book is devoted to a detailed analysis of the resource-based view of the firm. It begins with a discussion of the nature of resources, which are the inputs that firms use to produce goods and services. It then discusses the characteristics of resources that make them valuable, rare, and difficult to imitate. Finally, it discusses the implications of the resource-based view for the structure of the firm.

The fifth part of the book is devoted to a detailed analysis of the various models of the firm. It begins with a discussion of the neoclassical model, which is based on the assumption of perfect competition. It then discusses the transaction cost model, which is based on the assumption of imperfect competition. Finally, it discusses the resource-based view, which is based on the assumption of imperfect competition and the presence of resources that are valuable, rare, and difficult to imitate.

The book concludes with a summary of the main findings of the various models of the firm. It shows that the neoclassical model is only valid under very restrictive assumptions, while the transaction cost model and the resource-based view provide a more general and realistic framework for understanding the structure of the firm.

The first part of the paper is devoted to a general discussion of the problem of the origin of life. It is shown that the problem is not only a scientific one, but also a philosophical one. The scientific aspect of the problem is concerned with the question of how life arose from non-life. The philosophical aspect is concerned with the question of whether life is a necessary part of the universe or whether it is a mere accident.

The second part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the various theories of the origin of life. These theories are divided into two main groups: the theory of spontaneous generation and the theory of biogenesis. The theory of spontaneous generation is the older of the two and is based on the idea that life can arise from non-life. The theory of biogenesis is the newer of the two and is based on the idea that life can only arise from pre-existing life. The paper shows that the theory of spontaneous generation is based on a number of assumptions which are not supported by the facts. The theory of biogenesis, on the other hand, is based on a number of assumptions which are supported by the facts.

The third part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the various experiments which have been conducted in order to test the theory of spontaneous generation. These experiments are divided into two main groups: the experiments of Redi and the experiments of Pasteur. Redi's experiments were conducted in 1668 and showed that maggots do not arise from meat, but from the eggs of flies. Pasteur's experiments were conducted in 1859 and showed that life does not arise from non-life, but from pre-existing life. The paper shows that the results of these experiments are in complete agreement with the theory of biogenesis and in complete disagreement with the theory of spontaneous generation.

The fourth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the various theories of the origin of the first life. These theories are divided into two main groups: the theory of abiogenesis and the theory of panspermia. The theory of abiogenesis is the older of the two and is based on the idea that the first life arose from non-life. The theory of panspermia is the newer of the two and is based on the idea that the first life arose from pre-existing life elsewhere in the universe. The paper shows that the theory of abiogenesis is based on a number of assumptions which are not supported by the facts. The theory of panspermia, on the other hand, is based on a number of assumptions which are supported by the facts.

The fifth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the various experiments which have been conducted in order to test the theory of abiogenesis. These experiments are divided into two main groups: the experiments of Miller and the experiments of Fox. Miller's experiments were conducted in 1953 and showed that organic molecules can be synthesized from inorganic molecules. Fox's experiments were conducted in 1961 and showed that the first life could have arisen from non-life. The paper shows that the results of these experiments are in complete agreement with the theory of abiogenesis and in complete disagreement with the theory of panspermia.

The following article was taken from the New York Globe of July 21, 1847 (on file in the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C.) and is a reprint from the "Troy Whig" of March, 1841.

"In looking over a family register I find the following names recorded as the members of one family. Their ancestor was one of a number, unhappy in his native land, because devoted to the cause of Protestant Religion. He fled from his native country France upon the revocation of the famous Edict of Nantes by Louis XIV, the reigning monarch. Their names are given below and are on record in the Comptroller's Office in Albany. I find the names of nine of this family who served their country "in the times that tried men's souls" in the counties of Westchester and Dutchess.

The tenth one being too young at that period for actual service did in company with his brothers parade as a curiosity in presence of many witnesses. He however joined Wayne's Legion and was present in several severe conflicts with the Indians having narrowly escaped death, his charger being killed under him. He was also present at the great and decisive battle upon the rapids of the Miami and participated in its victory with his companions in arms Capt. W. H. Harrison the brave aide-de-camp of General Wayne, Recently elevated to the first office in the gift of his Countrymen and Capt. Solomon Van Rensselaer who was desperately wounded but survives. NAMES: Timothy, Abraham, Matthew, John, Nathaniel, Samuel, Nathan, Daniel, Stephen (father of E. C. Delavan) Cornelius, one of Wayne's Legion." (Troy Whig March, 1841)

"The family resided in the County of Westchester, during the Revolution and were much exposed to the depredations of the Tories, Cow Boys and Skinners and were constantly in a state of alarm. When called into actual service they had many hair-breadth escapes from the enemy. Nathaniel was a major of militia, but served under Continental officers in cases of emergency; Samuel was captain of mounted rangers and Stephen, his brother with the whole of his company narrowly escaped capture by Sir William Ericine, commander of 360 British legion horse; Daniel was Captain in the Continental service and acquitted himself with distinguished honors during the whole conflict. The ten brothers have all departed this life. Peace to their names." (Troy Post)

In 1836 Jonas R. Gale of Providence, R. I. visited the Illinois Country in search of land suitable for settlement. At Tremont he met Edward Cornelius Delavan of Albany, New York; retired merchant, land promoter and early American temperance advocate. Together they planned the promotion of a settlement on High Prairie and at Providence, R. I. on September 19, 1836 another land company to exploit the Illinois country was organized. Financed largely by Mr. Delavan under the name of the Delavan Associates, the new company had a capitalization of $30,000. It was decided to name the new city "Delavan" in honor of the noted temperance advocate and that the city should be devoid of all liquor selling establishments.

ABSTRACT
The reaction of carbon-13 with oxygen has been studied at 1000°C. The rate of reaction was found to be first order in carbon-13 and first order in oxygen. The activation energy for the reaction was determined to be 14.5 kcal/mole. The pre-exponential factor was found to be  $1.5 \times 10^7$  sec<sup>-1</sup>. The reaction was found to be reversible. The equilibrium constant for the reaction was determined to be 0.15 at 1000°C. The reaction was found to be independent of the surface area of the carbon-13.

INTRODUCTION
The reaction of carbon-13 with oxygen has been studied for many years. The reaction was first studied by H. S. Taylor and R. M. Harris in 1955. They found that the reaction was first order in carbon-13 and first order in oxygen. The activation energy for the reaction was determined to be 14.5 kcal/mole. The pre-exponential factor was found to be  $1.5 \times 10^7$  sec<sup>-1</sup>. The reaction was found to be reversible. The equilibrium constant for the reaction was determined to be 0.15 at 1000°C. The reaction was found to be independent of the surface area of the carbon-13.

EXPERIMENTAL
The reaction was studied in a flow system. Carbon-13 was prepared by the reduction of carbon-13 dioxide with hydrogen. The oxygen was prepared by the decomposition of potassium chlorate. The reaction was studied at 1000°C. The rate of reaction was measured by the change in the amount of carbon-13 over time.

Obituary of General Daniel Delavan (from a clipping in the George Edwin Delavan family Bible)

Obituary - It becomes again our duty to record the decease of another of the few remaining worthies of the Revolution among us. General Daniel Delavan died at his residence, in this village, on Friday last, in the 79th year of his age. The deceased had passed an active and responsible life. In early life he espoused the cause of his Country under the great and good LaFayette, and served, we believe, in the Continental Army until the close of the war, at which time he obtained the command of a company. Upon the restoration of peace, he returned to the active pursuits of private life, occasionally filling an office of trust and responsibility under our state government. Mr. Delavan spent most of his mature life in this village, and was one of the few enterprising man who first gave it an impulse of business and prosperity. The funeral solemnities were attended by a large concourse of citizens, in the Presbyterian Church, and after an impressive discourse delivered by the Rev. Mr. Henry, his remains were consigned to the narrow tenement in the burial ground some distance south of the village.

A BALLAD

On the death of General Delavan of the Revolutionary War, by George P. Morris.

Let not a tear be shed,
Of grief give not a token,
Although the silver thread
And golden bowl are broken;
A warrior lived - a Christian died,
Sorrow's forgotten in our pride

Go, bring his battle blade,
His helmet and his plume,
And to his trophies laid
Beside him in the tomb,
Where files of time - marked vet'rans come
With martial tramp and muffled drum.

Give to the earth his frame,
To moulder and decay;
But not his deathless name -
That cannot pass away.
In youth, in manhood, and in age,
He dignified his country's page.

Green be the willow bough
Above the swelling mound,
Where sleeps the hero now
In consecrated ground;
Thy epitaph, Oh Delavan,
God's noblest work - an honest man.

BOUTON ANCESTRY

The name is of French origin, and from 1350, for two centuries, the court records of France abound with the name. Nicholas Bouton, who bore the title of Count Chamilly, Baron Montague de Naton, was born about 1530, and the father of John and Harard twins, and Noel, all of whom were Huguenots and refugees during the persecution of the Protestants by the Catholics. Noel afterwards returned to France where he distinguished himself and was subsequently made Marshall of all France.

JOHN BOUTON, immigrant ancestor sailed from Gravesend, England July 1635, and landed in Boston, Mass., in December of that year. He was then aged 20. He lived first in Boston, then in Watertown and early in the settlement of Hartford, Conn., removed there. In 1651 he removed again to Norwalk, Conn., where he became an influential citizen. In 1671 and for several years after, he was a representative in the General Court of Connecticut, and held other offices in Norwalk. He married ALICE who survived him, and married second, Matthew Marvin. Her will dated December 1, 1680, and mentioned her son JOHN BOUTON and daughters Bridget Kollogg and Abigail Bouton and Rachel Smith and grandchildren Ruth and Rachel Kollogg and Sarah Brinswood. Among their children was JOHN, mentioned below. Richard was born about 1639, died in Norwalk, June 27, 1665, married Ruth. Bridget, born about 1642 married in 1660.

JOHN (2) (son of John), married 1st, Abigail, daughter of Matthew Marvin by a first wife. She was born in Hartford about 1640, and was living in 1680, when she was mentioned in the will of her stepmother, Alice Marvin formerly the wife of John Bouton first. He married 2nd Mary Stevenson. He lived in Norwalk. His will was dated December 25, 1760, and he died between that date and February 18, 1766/7. Children born in Norwalk: JOHN, September 30, 1659; Matthew, December 24, 1661; Rachel, December 16, 1667; Abigail, April 1, 1670; Mary, May 26, 1671; Joseph, about 1674; Thomas, about 1676; Elizabeth, 1670 and Richard, 1680.

JOHN (3) (son of John (2), son of John) was born in Norwalk, Conn. September 30, 1659, died before January 2, 1704/5. His estate was divided November 21, 1705, among "six children living." The sixth was probably Daniel. He settled in Norwalk, where he owned land jointly with his brother Matthew, which he sold January 25, 1693. The town records of Danbury show that he owned land there and those of New Canaan, that he was among the constitutents of the society of that place. Children: John over twenty one at the time of the inventory, married Sarah, a daughter of Jakin Gregory; Abigail, born 1689; Mary, 1692; NATHANIEL, 1695, mentioned below; Eleazar, 1701/2; Daniel, 1705.

NATHANIEL, (son of John (3), son of John (2), son of John) was born in Norwalk, Conn., 1695. He was one of the constitutents of New Canaan. In his will dated 1775 he makes no mention of his son John and daughter Rebecca, who probably died before that date. He married 1st. Hannah and 2nd Mary. Children born in New Canaan: HANNAH, November 24, 1721; Abigail, February 28, 1723; Nathaniel, September 6, 1726; Samuel, April 11, 1730; Jehiel, February 17, 1732; Mary, November 11, 1734; John, July 23, 1737; Daniel, October 24, 1740; Rebecca, 1742.

HANNAH, (da. of Nathaniel, son of John (3), son of John (2), son of John) married TIMOTHY DELAVAN, February 23, 1737, and became the mother of the ten Delavan sons enumerated herein.

THEORY

The first part of the theory is the definition of the system. The system is defined as a set of components that interact with each other. The components are defined as the elements that make up the system. The interaction between the components is defined as the process by which the components work together to achieve a common goal. The system is then defined as the collection of these components and their interactions.

The second part of the theory is the definition of the system's behavior. The behavior of the system is defined as the way in which the system responds to external inputs. The behavior is defined as the process by which the system takes in information from the environment and uses it to make decisions about how to respond. The system's behavior is then defined as the collection of these responses.

The third part of the theory is the definition of the system's structure. The structure of the system is defined as the way in which the components are organized. The structure is defined as the process by which the components are arranged in a hierarchy. The system's structure is then defined as the collection of these hierarchies.

The fourth part of the theory is the definition of the system's function. The function of the system is defined as the way in which the system achieves its goals. The function is defined as the process by which the system takes in information from the environment and uses it to make decisions about how to achieve its goals. The system's function is then defined as the collection of these decisions.

The fifth part of the theory is the definition of the system's properties. The properties of the system are defined as the way in which the system is characterized. The properties are defined as the process by which the system is described in terms of its characteristics. The system's properties are then defined as the collection of these characteristics.

The sixth part of the theory is the definition of the system's dynamics. The dynamics of the system are defined as the way in which the system changes over time. The dynamics are defined as the process by which the system evolves from one state to another. The system's dynamics are then defined as the collection of these changes.

The seventh part of the theory is the definition of the system's control. The control of the system is defined as the way in which the system is managed. The control is defined as the process by which the system is directed towards its goals. The system's control is then defined as the collection of these directions.

The eighth part of the theory is the definition of the system's evaluation. The evaluation of the system is defined as the way in which the system is assessed. The evaluation is defined as the process by which the system is judged in terms of its performance. The system's evaluation is then defined as the collection of these judgments.

THE MATTHEW MARVIN LINE

Matthew, youngest son of Edward and Margaret Marvin, was baptised in St. Mary's Church, Great Bantley, Essex, England, March 26, 1600; Rev. Robert Darnell was then its rector. His father's will gave him the "Marten house called Adams ailes (alias) Dreybrookes and 13 croftes of land called Martles and Brecken Hedges," on the condition that he paid his mother yearly during her life "the full sum of some poundes" in default of which it was to pass to his brother, Reinold with a like condition. He was then fifteen years old and probably resided there with his mother until her death, May 1633. He married 1st, about 1622, Elizabeth ---, born about 1604, judging from her age as given when she went to America. She died in Hartford, probably about 1640 and from the ages of his younger children, certainly not later than 1647. Rebecca, is thought to have been Elizabeth's youngest child as she is named in her father's will, but not in that of his second wife who mentions her own children then living. He married 2nd about 1647, Alice widow of John Bouton, born about 1610; in her will December 1, 1680 she calls herself "aged about seventy." She made oath to the inventory of her husband's estate December 17, 1680 and died soon after; the inventory of her own estate is dated the last of January 1680/1.

Matthew sailed from London in the "Increase" Robert Lea, master; having proved April 15, 1635 that his party had taken the "oathes of Allegiance and Supremacie." He had been a "cydeman" at St. Mary's in 1621; "Overseer" in 1627 and "Senior Warden" in 1628. He is last mentioned there August 22, 1633 when "William Littleburys, the servant of Matthew Marvin, was buried."

The record of his departure calls him "husbandman" age 35 and names his wife and children: Elizabeth Marvyn, aged 31; Elizabeth Marvinn, 13; Matthew Marvyn, 8; Marie Marvyn, 6; Sara Marvyn, 3; Hannah Marvyn, 1/2. The Increase sailed about the middle of April and reached New England about the first of June. Where he spent the first few months after his arrival is not known. His name is on the monument in honor of the first settlers of Hartford, the first of whom arrived there about November 1635 and Matthew was one of the twelve very earliest emigrants whose names are known and who formed the company known as "Adventurers" to whom belonged "Venturers Field."

In 1650 he went to Norwalk, Conn., where he was one of the original settlers. In the agreement of the Norwalk Planters with Roger Ludlow, June 19, 1650, and in the deed from Ramokinheage and other Indians of February 15, 1651, Matthew's name is third; in the confirmatory Patent of the General Court of June 8, 1686 (after his death) Mr. Matthew Marvin is sixth.

Children of his 1st wife Elizabeth: i Elizabeth, bapt. September 15, 1622; ii Matthew, bapt. November 8, 1626; iii Marie, bapt. December 16, 1628; iv Sarah, christened December 27, 1631; v Hannah, born about 1634; in England aged 1/2 years in April 1635; vi Abigail, born about 1637-8 in Hartford; vii Rebecca, born about 1639 in Hartford. Children by his 2nd wife Alice: viii Lydia, born 1647-52 in Hartford; ix Samuel, born in Hartford, bapt. February 6, 1647-8; x Rachel, born --- bapt. December 30, 1649 in Hartford.

ABIGAIL, daughter of Matthew and Elizabeth Marvin, born in Hartford, Connecticut about 1637-8; she was living in December 1680 when her stepmother died, but probably died soon after, married as his first wife, January 1th, 1656-7 (Norwalk records) JOHN, son of John and Alice Bouton, died 1706-7; his will is dated December 25, 1706 and was approved the 27th of January following. He married 2nd Mary --- by whom he had issue. The first child of John and Abigail (Marvin) Bouton was John (3) b. September 20, 1650; d. January 1704-5 in Danbury, Connecticut.

John Bouton (3) had a son Nathaniel, who had a daughter Hannah, who married Timothy Delavan.

Introduction

The purpose of this study is to investigate the effects of various factors on the growth and development of a specific plant species. The study was conducted over a period of six months, during which time the plants were grown under different conditions of light, temperature, and nutrient availability. The results of the study are presented in the following sections, and the conclusions are drawn from the data collected.

The first section of the study describes the experimental setup, including the selection of the plant species, the growth medium, and the environmental conditions. The second section presents the results of the experiment, showing the growth rate and the development of the plants under different conditions. The third section discusses the implications of the results, and the fourth section provides a conclusion.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a general discussion of the problem.

2. In the second part, we consider the case of a single particle. We show that the motion is periodic and that the period is independent of the energy.

3. In the third part, we consider the case of two particles. We show that the motion is also periodic and that the period is independent of the energy.

4. In the fourth part, we consider the case of three particles. We show that the motion is also periodic and that the period is independent of the energy.
